The current Somaliland Constitution was adopted by referendum in 2001 with the positive vote in excess of 97% of those casts. That Constitution provides a valid starting point, but inevitably new issues arise and practical gaps in existing articles become apparent. It is therefore an opportune time to consider the issues that most need addressing, and the options available for making the changes needed. A number of specific questions reflect recent or current issues:

- What are the checks and balances on the power of each branch?
- How should political parties be formed?
- How should elections be run?
- How should the members of the houses of parliament be selected?

Your Participation is greatly appreciated and welcome
